

In a democracy it is imperative that all points of view be heard and reported. Any incident can be reported and seen in a variety of ways. People are dependent on the news media for their information. This information is received by them in a variety of ways. These means of communication need to be independent of each other for our democracy to survive.

Pat Allen